Who made this list, and why?

Hi there!

I'm Melissa, your baking business mentor who has been in the baking industry for almost 2 decades.

I have done everything from work in a grocery store bakery, to being the lead designer at a million dollar bakery, to running my own home bakery business while traveling around the US as a military spouse. I currently offer gourmet products locally, teach creative classes and mentor bakers online.

I know how it can be difficult and frustrating to source quality baking supplies online, especially when you have never used or even seen them in person. I would like to share my current materials list with you, to help you weed out the good items from the bad, as you make purchases on Amazon for your baking.

I can not guarantee any of these items, seeing as I am not the manufacturer. So please do read descriptions as a diligent customer, before you purchase.

The links for these products have been generated from my Amazon Affiliate page and I personally own or have used pretty much everything found here. If you purchase items using these links, you will not pay any extra, and a small portion of the sale will go to supporting our mission of helping bakers start their own bakery businesses.

If you have any questions about this list, or would like me to find or add an item for you, please email me at melissa@buildabetterbakernow.com.

Happy Supply Hunting!

Baking Pans- I suggest Magic Line Brand

NOTE: You should choose light colored, sturdy metal pans with sharp seams. You will need at least two pans of a certain size if you plan to bake a 2 or more layer cake (4-5 inches tall). I recommend learning how to carve shapes into cake rather than buying a lot of shaped cake pans, although I do recommend having the ball shaped pan.
